Jewellery from Natural Materials (Jewellery Handbooks) Beth Legg

Six step-by-step projects for making jewelry from natural materials. Each chapter includes brief information about the material (history and qualities), an introduction to the item to be made in the section, and information about other materials and tools required to work with this particular material. Pieces made in each chapter will vary, e.g., there will be a necklace made from grasses, a ring made of stone, a brooch constructed out of wood, and so on - this way the author can demonstrate a broad range of techniques. The focus of the book will be on producing contemporary pieces with a broad appeal, offering readers the chance to produce their own wearable, interesting jewelry that is not too challenging, but miles away from the 'tourist tat' or 'feather on a string' look.

Images will include the work of varied international jewelry makers, from locations including the UK and US, Germany, Switzerland, Scandinavia, Australia and New Zealand.
