Joe Meeks, a lifelong drifter, for the first time ever has someone else in his life. His son Wade, a 12-year-old naif Joe has never known, has lost his mother and has no one else to look after him. Feeling unable and unwilling to have anyone in his itinerant life, Joe decides, against his will, he must return to the home he ran away from many years before, getting word that he has a chance to inherit enough money to send Wade off to boarding school. But once back among the remnants of his hardscrabble ranch family and the quirky denizens of the far-removed mountain community of Meagher, Joe discovers, like his gold-miner forebears, the treasures of a true inheritance are worth mining but hard to unearth.
