Jovan Vukasin, is the Boss of a Serbian Gang in London, with a James Bond complex. Why has his street cred plummeted to the level of radio active waste; and why has he set out on a series of blunders that can only spell disaster in the long run, putting his ultimate goal of emulating James Bond's lifestyle on the Riviera in jeopardy? After settling on a daring raid, targeting the Ukrainian London gang Pakhan's cache of diamonds, which are expected to arrive in Tel Aviv, he sends out his troops to relieve the opposition of their gemstones, which results in hilarious consequences. How does Danylko, the Ukrainian pakhan, react to this? The story rockets through Tel Aviv, Bulgaria, Serbia and Africa, with a fast turnover of candidates for the top job, before returning to London, where chaos reigns supreme with no firm guiding hand directing the business. How can Scotland Yard keep the ultimate gangland war from erupting in London? All of this leaves God convulsed with mirth, at the futile attempts of mankind to usurp Himself in the scheme of things.
