The Pragmatistic Thought of Peirce, James & Dewey Larry Slater

This thesis attempts to trace the growth of the pragmatic doctrine of truth through the works of its three famous advocates: Charles Sander Peirce, William James and John Dewey. The thesis flows from an examination of Peirce's initial statements on pragmatism, to the changing position of William James as presented through various magazine articles and books over a period of about thirty years to the pragmatistic doctrine as set forth by John Dewey. If you are a big fan of pragmatism as I am then you will find the direction of this paper both invigorating and informative. Included is a reprint of the work by William James entitled Habit alone worth the small price of this work. It is a hinge-point for some of James most important ideas.
