Excerpt from Giovanni Pico Della Mirandola: His Life by His Giovanni Francesco Pico: Also Three of His Letters; His Interpretation of Psalm XVI.; His Twelve Rules of a Christian Life; His Twelve Points of a Perfect Lover; And His Deprecatory Hymn to God

Giovanni Pico Della Mirandola, "the Phoenix of the wits," is one of those writers whose personality will always count for a great deal more than their works. His extreme, almost feminine beauty, high rank, and chivalrous character, his immense energy and versatility, his insatiable thirst for knowledge, his passion for theorizing, his rare combination of intellectual hardihood with genuine devoutness of spirit, his extraordinary precocity, and his premature death, make up a personality so engaging that his name at any rate, and the record of his brief life, must always excite the interest and enlist the sympathy of mankind, though none but those, few in any generation, who love to loiter curiously in the bypaths of literature and philosophy, will ever care to follow his eager spirit through the labyrinths of recondite speculation which it once thrived with such high and generous hope.
