Sent away to high school in the coastal town of North Bay, Angus is lonely and homesick until he meets Kes Grimshaw, the boy who will become his best friend, and Kate Ferguson, the girl who will become much more to him. But a clash between the boys with the loutish Charlie Ratcliffe, who also has his eye on Kate, leads to a dramatic and fatal climax. The themes of love, loss, loyalty and evil explored in Bodger, Peter Jean's first novel, are developed and refined in this sequel.
